Techniques for Human-computer interaction

• All interactions between humans and the computer must go through our senses. We have in this respect a set of “input-channels” (in to our senses from the technical environment) and “output-channels” (out from our senses to the technical environment).

Important channels for “input” and ”output”